

Learners will have the skills of analysis and enquiry to describe, understand and make judgements regarding the approaches in psychology and apply that knowledge to explain human behaviour. Learners can understand and debate controversies in psychology drawing on synoptic examples to illustrate their points. Learners devise and execute research projects, evaluate novel research and are confident in their use of descriptive and inferential statistics.

